COMMENT OF THE DAY

Cyprus Outlook

SIR John Harding's visit to London throws new light on the British Government's intentions in Cyprus. Sir John has told parliamentarians that there is to be an intensified campaign against Eoka terrorists in the next three months followed by a resumption of negotiations with new Cypriot leaders. He has acquired a new Police chief to tighten civilian security measures on the island and he is reported to be hopeful that law and order might be restored in a year.

Sketchy news reports leave a lot of questions unanswered. Intensified operations against terrorists, for instance, suggest that the hardships of the Cypriot people will be increased, not lessened which, in turn, will accentuate exasperation. But it is not certain whether this will result in ultimate revolution of the emergency and rejection of terrorism or increased intransigence.

Ship Explosion

8 KILLED, 21 INJURED

Manila, June 7.

Eight crewmen were killed and 21 others injured on Tuesday in the explosion of the US Navy ship LST-657 off Indo-China, a US Navy spokesman said today. He said the names of the casualties, who were among the 74 crew members of the LST operated by the US Military Sea Transport Service were not immediately known.

He said 32 of the crew members were Japanese, 40 Vietnamese, with one US Air Force sergeant and one French soldier. He said the US sergeant was definitely not among those dead or injured.

The latest wire service report from Saigon, however, told of a "Japanese" manned freighter, carrying 900 tons of surplus munitions and bombs, which exploded, burned and sank off Pointe Cetra de Mer, 165 miles south of Saigon.

PLANE DESPATCHED

The report, quoting an announcement by the French authorities, said two of the all-Japanese crew were killed, 26 injured — eight critically — and five missing.

An American naval air station in the Philippines picked up an SOS from the sinking ship and sent a plane which picked up some of the survivors.

The spokesman at the US naval station at Sangley Point in Cavite Province said the stricken ship was on a communiqué dumping mission when the explosion occurred. Details of how the ship exploded were not yet known, he said. He said the first report as relayed at Sangley Point showed that the dead and wounded were being removed by an unidentified aircraft.

HEADING FOR BAY

He said it was learned later that a French landing craft was proceeding to Camran Bay, where medical facilities were readily available. As soon as things get clear, the spokesman said, the ship, which suffered "minor" damage, will proceed to Saigon.

The first ship to respond to the LST's SOS was the USNS Estrella, followed by a British merchant ship that reached the scene at early dawn yesterday, a spokesman said. — United Press.

One proposal that does deserve thought between now and September when talks are due to begin is whether Cyprus, as an important Mediterranean base, may become more a Nato than a purely British interest, for it is difficult even now to distinguish between their strategic interests in the area. One move that might be made is to invite Greek and Turkish forces to establish bases on the island under a Nato commander. This may, among other things, help to rid the notion attributed to a number of Greeks that the island is under the thumb of foreign occupants.

JAPAN WANTS TO, INDONESIA WILL DO, GERMANY MAY DO

Relaxation Of Trade Embargo

Tokyo, June 6.

Trade Minister Tanzan Ishibashi said today Japan should lower its embargo against Communist China as Great Britain is doing.

The outspoken Cabinet Minister reacted sharply to the announcement in London that British colonial governments have been given discretionary authority to export to Communist China goods on the Red China blacklist which Russia is free to buy in western markets.

While Foreign Office spokesmen in Tokyo hedged and said the matter affected only Great Britain, Ishibashi told a news conference in Shizuoka: "I would like to relax the embargo to the same degree as on exports to Russia." He added, "Japan, like Britain, must try to increase its trade with Communist China."

In such a case, Japan may soon be exporting to the China mainland such items as locomotives, electric generators, bulldozers, and secondary steel products, all of which are banned now.

At any rate, odds appear to be four-to-one that those items will go on display at the sample fairs in Red China this year. — United Press.

NO LONGER BOUND

Djakarta, June 6.

Indonesia announced today that she no longer considers herself bound by the United Nations embargo on trading rubber with Communist China.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Indonesia plans to start exporting rubber to China soon. The UN embargo cannot apply to Indonesia when it has been lifted from Malaya, he said. — United Press.

HANDICAPPED

Ishibashi's statement was the latest indication that Japan's export firms can expect more help from their government in trade with the Reds than they have in the past.

Many Japanese charge Japan is being unfairly handicapped by being restricted from exporting to its nearest Communist customer — Red China — now which Western European countries are selling freely to their nearest Red neighbour — Russia and the Eastern European satellites.

Japan has found in the US and elsewhere are uncertain at best, and, in the case of the US, may be cut off at any time by pressure from domestic producers.

WEST GERMANY

Bonn, June 6.

West German authorities are studying the possibility of relaxing the China embargo imposed by the North Atlantic pact states, a usually well informed commercial source said here today.

A relaxation of the embargo on tractors would be of particular interest here, as West Germany has a flourishing tractor industry.

The Secretary-General of the West German Committee for Eastern Trade, said in reply to a question today, that he would expect West Germany to follow suit if Britain eased the embargo rules. — Reuter.

ENCOURAGEMENT

Under this pressure, the government has moved gradually from passive recognition of private trade agreements negotiated with the Chinese by Japanese businessmen toward open encouragement. Recent government steps in this direction include:

1. Adoption of a "special permission" system for trade with Peking — a formula already in use in Great Britain — to permit export of embargoed goods where commodities received in return are high-priority items.

2. Permission to display blacklisted goods in Japanese trade fairs to be held in Peking and Shanghai this October, to December on the promise that all such embargoed goods be brought back out of China. Japanese trade sources said they will be permitted to display all strategic goods not on the Soviet list.

3. Open statements by high officials favouring the exchange of trade delegations with Red China. Ishibashi repeated his espousal of that move at Shizuoka today.

MUST RELAX

The government has not yet decided formally to lower Red China trade barriers. But business groups are confident Japan must relax its policy at least to the same extent as Great Britain, out of self-defence. Otherwise, they claim, Japan will be left at the post in the race for Red China's trade.

Observers predict the Japanese government will seek US approval of such a move.

CLOSING DOWN

Scapa Flow would be followed by further decisions to close other British home naval bases. It was understood here that the armed forces, and particularly the Royal Navy, would bear the brunt of the £100,000 budget economies planned by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Harold Macmillan. — United Press.

He Was True Negotiator

Tito Will Visit US If Invited

STATEMENT TO NEWSMEN

Moscow, June 6.

Marshal Tito, President of Yugoslavia, said here tonight that he is prepared to go to Washington if invited to discuss Yugoslavia's relations with the United States.

(President Eisenhower told a Washington press conference today that there should be a re-study of American aid to Yugoslavia in the light of what best served United States interest).

Marshal Tito, speaking to Western correspondents at a Kremlin reception, said he thought his current three-week visit to Russia would improve Yugoslavia's relations with the United States.

He said when asked if it would improve relations, "Yes, yes, it will make for better relations with the United States, the Soviet Union and all countries."

If Invited

Asked about the possibility of a visit to Washington, Marshal Tito replied: "Yes, if I am invited, why not?"

Marshal Tito also said that Yugoslavia relations with the United States would not suffer as a result of Senator Joseph McCarthy's current campaign in the Senate to cut American aid to Yugoslavia.

Marshal Tito left by train tonight for Leningrad, accompanied by Marshal Bulganin and Mr. Shepilov the Soviet Foreign Minister.

No Comment

Washington, June 6.

The White House tonight declined to comment immediately on Marshal Tito's statement in Moscow that he was ready to visit Washington if invited to discuss Yugoslavia's relations with the United States.

Marshal Tito's statement appeared to catch officials by surprise, as it had not been expected that such a formal visit would be made publicly.

The White House and State Department appear unwilling to agree to such a visit at present least until a clear view is obtained of the results of Marshal Tito's discussions with Soviet leaders in Moscow this week.

Officials said that in any case, it seemed impossible to arrange a visit this year. — Reuter.

Bigger Pensions For Governors

London, June 6.

Retiring British Colonial governors may receive another £700 sterling a year pension as a result of a new Parliamentary bill, the text of which was issued here today.

The bill proposes to amend present legislation to raise maximum Colonial pensions from £2,300 to £3,000 per year. — China Mail Special.

No More French Light Arms For Mid East

Paris, June 6.

The French government today decided not to make any further exports of light arms to Middle East countries, a government spokesman announced after a meeting of the Council of Ministers.

The government decision included Israel.

Today's decision had been heralded by statements by both M. Guy Mollet, the French Prime Minister, during the National Assembly debate which ended last night in a vote of confidence in his government policy, and by M. Christian Pineau, Foreign Minister.

A communiqué issued after a council of ministers today made no mention of the arms question.

CATEGORICAL

But in reply to reporters' questions, M. Gerard Jaquet, Secretary of State for Information, agreed that the government had officially decided on such a ban.

Asked if the ban included current orders, the government spokesman replied categorically: "Yes. There will be no more exports of light arms to Middle East countries."

He refused to make any comment when asked about exports of French heavy arms and aircraft.

French official sources said last week that France had completed the delivery to Egypt of 40 light tanks and about twenty 155 millimetre howitzers. — Reuter.

Threat To Britain's Ancient Cars

London, June 6. Many thousands of the ancient cars that honk and rattle along Britain's highways are under virtual sentence of death as the result of a Government Bill passed by the House of Commons.

The bill, which only requires the endorsement of the House of Lords to become law, contains a clause giving the Government power to introduce compulsory tests on the steering, brakes and lights of cars 10 years old or more.

It also bids to reduce the 3,000 casualties a year caused by motorists trying to avoid stray dogs by imposing 26 sterilizing fines on dog-owners for allowing their pets on busy roads.

Parking Meters

It tackles the big city problem of obstruction by proposing to introduce parking meters, and raises the speed limit for lorries from 20 to 30 miles an hour.

The big motoring associations—the Automobile Association and the Royal Automobile Club—are strongly opposed to the idea of compulsory tests for old cars, seeing it as a blow to many of their members. For "poor man's" motoring is a flourishing hobby in Britain, a country where new cars are out of the reach of millions largely because of heavy taxes imposed by the Government.

Of 4,000,000 private cars and motor bikes estimated to be on the roads, about two million are aged 10 years or more. It is not an uncommon sight on a Sunday afternoon to see a working class family, father at the wheel, children behind, bowling along the roads in a Rolls-Royce which was probably owned by a millionaire when new 30 or 40 years ago.

The small advertisement columns of the daily newspapers are filled with offers of pre-war cars ranging from 1934 Austin at £2.25 sterling to 1939 Jaguars at £100 sterling.

Work to enlarge a wharf in the Whangpoo River in Shanghai to enable 10,000 ton ships to moor alongside began yesterday, the New China News Agency said tonight. The work is scheduled to be completed in November this year.

The volume of cargo to be handled by the wharf after its expansion is expected to be about three times the present amount. At present, only ships below 1,000 tons can come alongside, the agency said. — France-Press.

BUT NOMINATING CONVENTION MAY BE OPEN

San Francisco, June 6. Supporters of Mr Adlai Stevenson today hailed his nearly two-to-one primary election victory in California over Senator Estes Kefauver as virtually assuring him of the Democratic Party's presidential nomination.

But there were 4000 Democrats who still believed the battle would go into the Democratic nominating convention in August "wide open." Mr Stevenson himself said he now considered Mr Averell Harriman, the multi-millionaire Governor of New York, as his closest rival.

Discussing his rivals, Mr Stevenson picked Governor Harriman as his closest. Mr Harriman, once Ambassador to Moscow and Britain, has termed himself an "inactive" contender for the nomination.

Dark Horse

As for Senator Stuart Symington (Democrat—Missouri) often mentioned as a strong "dark horse," Mr Stevenson said he did not consider him a rival, since the Senator did not actually indicated his availability.

He did not mention Senator Kefauver. — Reuter.

Latest Results

Mr Harriman, avoiding personalities, interpreted the California result as meaning a Democratic victory in November over the Republican candidate, President Eisenhower.

Latest results from California gave Mr Stevenson 748,451 to Senator Kefauver's 467,512.

President Eisenhower, unopposed on the Republican primary ballot, had 737,103.

That return was from 16,850 precincts while the Democratic result was from a greater number, 18,254.

By winning California, Mr Stevenson picked up 68 more votes at the Democratic convention, boosting his total to 204 delegates committed to him.

Long Time

Senator Kefauver had 160, and other candidates—mostly "favourite sons"—had 308. Some 370 convention votes remained uncommitted. To win the nomination a candidate must secure at least 980 votes at the convention.

Mr Stevenson himself shied away from predicting the outcome of the convention in advance.

"It's a long time until August," he pointed out, adding that he did not have enough delegates automatically to assure his nomination.

Among the imported goods, the agency continued, were automobiles from Britain and the Netherlands, chemical fertilizer from Japan, West Germany and Belgium, and scientific instruments and machine tools from 13 countries, including France and Sweden. — Reuter.

No Two Chinas Says Nationalist

Tokyo, June 6. NATIONALIST China's new ambassador to Japan warned today his Government would break off diplomatic and trade relations if Japan ever established diplomatic ties with Peking.

Dr Yorkson C. T. Shen, in an exclusive interview with United Press staff correspondent Fred G. Braithwaite, dashed hopes of Japanese Socialists that Japan could maintain a "two Chinas" policy.

"It would result in the rupturing of diplomatic and trade relations between the Nationalist Chinese and the Japanese governments," Mr Shen said.

He added that he did not think "competent" government circles in Japan considered establishing relations with Peking.

He declined comment on reports that Japan's Socialist Party has been putting pressure on the Government to open negotiations for diplomatic ties with Peking.

He said, however, that if Japan allowed Peking to open a trade mission in Tokyo, Communists would infiltrate the country under its guise.

"We hope the Japanese Government will think twice in the materialization of this position," he said. — United Press.

CHEMICAL POWERED BOMBER

Washington, June 6. THE Assistant Air Force Secretary, Mr L. S. Garlock, said today that the Air Force had a "high priority" project to develop a "chemical powered" bomber.

Mr Garlock, the Air Force's financial manager, made a cryptic reference to the secret project in urging the Senate Military Appropriations sub-Committee to approve the Air Force's budget for the coming fiscal year.

High Priority

The research and development programme, he said, included such "high priority" items as the ballistic missiles, nuclear-powered bomber, chemical-powered bomber, high-powered long-range radar, electronic warning and control and similar projects.

On May 15 the Navy announced through Representative Ed Edmondson that it had asked Congress for authority to build a plant to produce a new "high energy" chemical fuel at Muskogee, Oklahoma. The new fuel, using a special chemical base, is intended for use in missiles and aircraft.

No Details

Mr Garlock did not give details of the nature of the chemical power being studied, but his statement indicated that the Air Force was looking in directions other than jet fuel and nuclear energy to power bombers of the future.

There have been reports in aviation circles that the Air Force is studying the burning of combustible metals to furnish power for future supersonic bombers.—United Press.

LUCKY ESCAPE

Blantyre, Nyasaland, June 6. Two-year-old David Niven suffered only superficial injuries when he fell out of a fast-moving train while travelling with his parents through Portuguese East Africa to Nyasaland.

David's absence was not noticed until the train arrived at the next station on the line. After a fruitless search of the train, the train was shunted back and the driver spotted David's red hair on the track.

David, with only superficial injuries, was lifted into the engine and rejoined his parents.

Nationalist Envoy Meets Eisenhower

Washington, June 6. Upon the occasion of the presentation of his letter of credence to President Eisenhower this morning at the White House, Dr Hollington Tong, new Ambassador of the Nationalist Chinese Government to the United States said: "Our two countries are more than traditional friends, they had been twice comrades in arms against international aggression."

"Many of our foreign friends have taken note of them and they have caused resentment, misunderstanding, and apprehension in the foreign community.

WHAT ARE THE JOBS OF AN ODD-JOB MAN?

London, June 6. Just what jobs are of an odd-job man?

Bill West, 48-year-old odd-job man for the local council at Ballyholland, Northumberland is putting this conundrum to his union after a "bulldogs" association protested because he had fitted a water cistern in a house.

The council told the association that Mr West had fitted the cistern because their own qualified plumber was not available, but he would not be called on to do plumbing work again.

Now, Mr West is worried because, in the absence of the plumber, he has again been put on to other plumbing jobs.

So he has appealed to the Transport and General Workers' Union to tell him what jobs an odd-job man can do. —China Mail Special.

A-POWERED MERCHANT SHIP URGED

Washington, June 6. The chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, Mr Lewis Strauss, prodded Congress today to build a nuclear-powered merchant ship before some other nation does.

Mr Strauss headed a group of official witnesses who urged the Senate Committee to start President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace ship.

The administration spokesman favoured a bill which would authorise immediate construction of the so-called "peace ship."

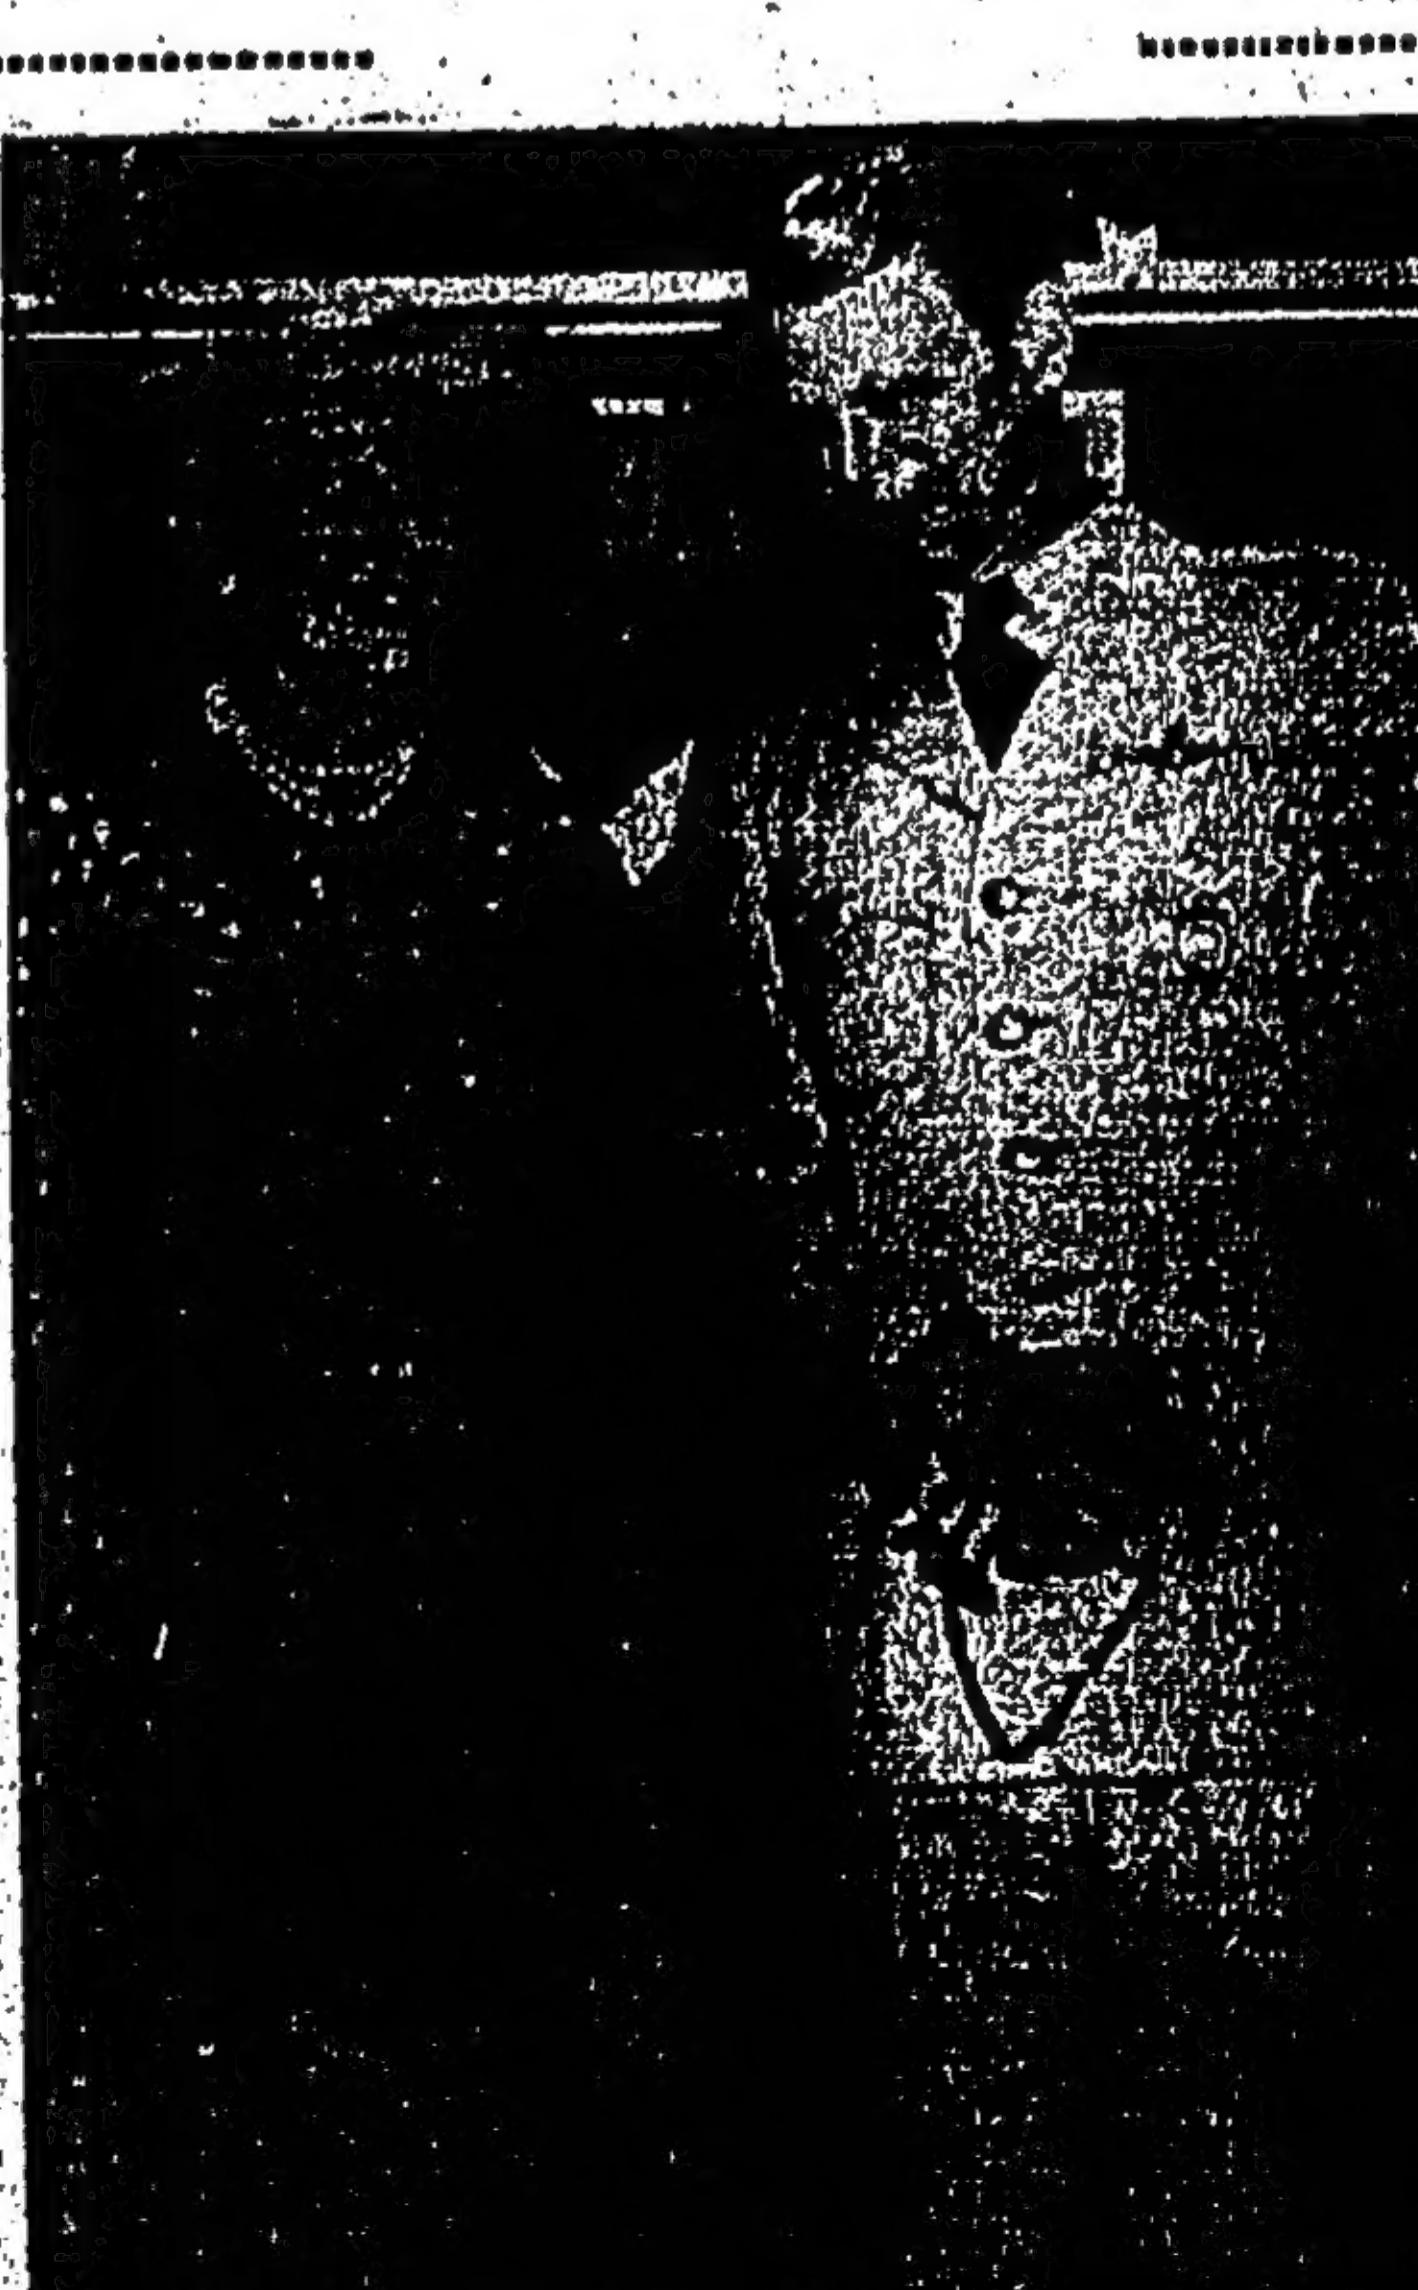

It would also authorise subsequent construction of a second ship as the first step toward development of economically competitive atom ships.

MASTERY OF ATOM

President Eisenhower has repeatedly urged Congress to build a ship to tour foreign ports with atomic exhibits and demonstrate the peaceful uses of the atom. Critics have contended that the show boat would add nothing to atomic knowledge.

Mr Strauss commented that the Russians had announced that they were building a nuclear-powered ice-breaker. And he offered a newspaper article reporting that five other nations were interested in atomic propulsion for surface vessels.

YUGOSLAVIA AND RUSSIA REACH COMPLETE UNDERSTANDING—TITO

Moscow, June 6.

Yugoslav President Josip Tito said in Moscow today that the Soviet leaders had shown "complete understanding concerning Yugoslavia's position" during the talks he had so far had with them during his visit.

Marshal Tito said: "We had no difficulty in finding common points of view, particularly concerning our independence; our sovereignty and the independence of our foreign policy."

The Yugoslav President was speaking at a grand reception given in his honour at the Kremlin Palace by Marshal Klement Voroshilov, President of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

Among those present at the reception were: Communist Party First Secretary Nikita Khrushchev, Premier Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, First Vice-Premier and former Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov, Vice-Premier and former Prime Minister Georgi Malenkov, First Vice-Premier Lazar Kaganovich and Anatoly Mikoyan, and new Foreign Minister Dimitri Shepilov.

Diplomatic Corps

Among the 2,000 guests were the full diplomatic corps, led by Rolf Solheim, Swedish Ambassador to Moscow.

Marshal Tito said he was convinced that "the time will come when all the most complicated international problems will be settled through peaceful contacts," such as his present visit to the Soviet leaders.

He said of the normalisation of Yugoslav-Soviet relations: "All that happened before was artificial and against the wishes of our peoples. The welcome we have received here is the proof." He added: "We are here not only to strengthen our friendship, but also because it is in accordance with our policy of co-operation with all countries."

Marshal Tito was replying to a welcome speech by Marshal

Mihail Voroshilov and he would like to believe that the development of friendly relations between the two countries would be welcomed by all peace-loving peoples and, in particular, the countries of Asia and Africa, who need peace to throw off the colonialist yoke and recover their national independence."

During the reception, Marshal Tito was presented to the diplomatic guests and to the North Korean President, Kim Il Sung, who is staying off in Moscow on his way to visit Berlin. —France-Press.

INFORMAL OUTLINE OF SUNFED

United Nations, June 6. An informal outline of the proposed special United Nations fund for Economic Development was provided today by a 16-nation committee that has been meeting for the last month.

This Committee analysed replies to a UN questionnaire on the establishment of the Fund, known as SUNFED. The questionnaire was sent to 85 governments, but only 48 have replied. Neither the United States nor Russia, which would be expected to make major contributions to SUNFED, replied.

The Committee drew the conclusion that governments favoured the establishment of the Fund, known as SUNFED, from the 12th anniversary of the landing of United States troops in France to liberate Europe from the Hitler-Mussolini axis. He recalled how costly it was to wage that war.

Special Attitudes

Then he went on to say that since the war United States policy had been to wage peace.

"If you are waging peace," he continued, "you cannot be too particular sometimes about the specific attitudes that different countries take."

"We were a young country once and our whole policy for the first 100 years—or 150—with we were neutral."

"We constantly asserted we were neutral in the wars of the World and wars in Europe and antagonisms."

"Now, today there are certain nations that say they are neutral. This doesn't necessarily mean what it is often interpreted to mean, neutral as between right and wrong or decency and infamy."

"They are using the term 'neutral' with respect to attachment to military alliances. And they point out that this is not the disadvantage of such a country as ours."

Attack Them

"If a nation is truly neutral, if it is attacked by anybody—and we are not going to attack them—public opinion of the world is outraged."

"If it has unaided military assistance with another great power things could happen to it. Difficulties along its borders... and people would say 'Good enough for it. They asked for it.'

Contending Forces

STAR LESLIE CARON SIGHS FOR LIFE

By ALAN BRIEN

London
ORD DAVID CECIL stopped with a jerk like a man who has caught his braces on a door knob. He seemed amazed at the sight of the tiny girl in the brown fur coat and the outsize Garbo sunglasses who stood with me in the shadow of Oxford's seventeenth-century Sheldonian Theatre.

But Miss Leslie Caron was oblivious of her effect upon him. It did not occur to her that even a distinguished professor of English literature might have difficulty in finding the right image for a 24-year-old enigma who has been described as a wistful monkey, a beautiful bulldog, a toothy rubber doll, a lovable elf and a snub-nosed gazelle. She was in search of another Oxford hero and I was guiding her to his shrine.

Typical

"I have always thought of Rex Harrison as the typical undergraduate. Can you show me the spire he climbed in 'Rake's Progress'?"

At the base of the Martyrs' Memorial — a 70-foot-high stone pencil that seems to have been badly sharpened with a hucksaw — she pouted with disappointment.

"Is this really it? Why, it isn't big at all. I could easily climb this thing. Any time."

MISS CARON IN OXFORD
One would need to be terribly intellectual.

And so she could. When Oxford for her represented more than just the last stop on the route to London. "Two poles of success in show business with her cat-footed grace, a little old dream-spire can hold few terrors."

If in the past she has ever seemed to lose her lead for heights, she is now at the Tom Quad of Christ Church. "But I suppose they are just as steady, even if the knuckles occasionally show white."

This gay, shy, tough Parisian urchin with the face of a clown and the legs of a goddess (half faced, boy-hipped Left Bank look).

"Left Bank? You can't mean I look like those students with dirty hair and tight pants in St. Germain des Pres? They dress like a crowd of hoboes."

I said that she would have been the greatest sensation since Zuleika Dobson — especially just after the war when every Oxford girl tried to achieve that impossible look. Stan Laurel, half Marlene Dietrich, was a star of the Ballet des Champs Elysées at 16. Yet when Gene Kelly called back stage to offer her a film role, she slipped away without seeing him.

A sensation

At 18 she was a Hollywood star dancing with Kelly in "An American in Paris" after settling the deal by trans-Atlantic telephone.

Now, at 24, Leslie Caron still has two years left to run on her contract with MGM. She would like this contract to end "as soon as possible." For a new career beckons her. She has a play in the West End, "Gigi," playing the role which made Audrey Hepburn an international star on Broadway.

Peasants

THE SCOTS: "Just like French peasants. Aberdeen might be any of our northern towns with the sea."

THE ENGLISH: "The most balanced people in the world."

Except for their passion for beautiful it looks — and pass my flowers. They stuff so many of peak at 30. them everywhere that the flowers get to look quite silly."

Her favourite sight in Britain? "Your cemeteries. So poetic with all these sad messages on the little stones."

The provincial tour may have been tiring. The thought of the first night of "Gigi" may have been unnerving. But Leslie Caron's eyes were as bright as surgical mirrors, her grin as wide and fresh as a slice of melon.

It was hard to recognise the edgy, defensive walt I had met in London a year before.

"I was terrified of newspapermen then," she said. "Now I tell myself they are just as terrified of me."

This new confidence has allowed her to give up the ballet exercises she had practised for hours every day since childhood. She has no regrets.

"I don't want to devote my life to physical culture — however

"The only advantage is that you can act out things which would be censored if it weren't for the music. Examine some ballet gestures in slow motion sometime. Often they are rather shocking."

"But then all movie censorship is just a joke. What one star can do, another cannot. It all depends on the sort of reputation they've got for virtue."

"You should see some of the Hollywood censors at work. One wears a dress with a neckline which plunges down to here."

"Yes, really."

"There are lots of things I want to do on the stage. Like Gigi and St. Joan. But as for dancing, from now on, I'm not a ballerina, I'm a hoofer."

A KISS FROM THE GIRL IN THE CASE, SHE IS COSY AND CALCULATING

★ ★ ★ JAMES BOND, secret service agent, is impersonating a diamond smuggler. As part of the pay-off he is taken to hunch-backed "Shady" Tree, who runs the New York end of the House of Diamonds. He is told to back a "fixed" horse at a race track to win the $5,000 due to him.

★ ★ ★ BOND had walked for only a few minutes when it suddenly occurred to him that he was being followed. There was no evidence for it except a slight tingling of the scalp and an extra awareness of the people near him, but he had faith in his sixth sense, and he at once stopped in front of the shop window. He was passing, and looked casually back along 46th Street.

Nothing but a lot of miscellaneous people moving slowly on the sidewalk, mostly on the same side as himself, the side that was sheltered from the sun. There was no sudden movement into a doorway, nobody casually wiping his face with a handkerchief to avoid recognition, nobody bending down to tie a shoelace.

Bond examined the Swiss watches in his shop window and then turned and sauntered on. After a few yards he stopped again. Still nothing.

"Well," said Tiffany Case, "since it's your cheque, I'm going to have an evening, and what you off with you?" Bond continued, "I've been longing for this evening. And I'm going to have just the same as you. And I've got plenty of money for the cheque. Mr. Tree tossed me double or quits for five hundred dollars this morning, and I won."

At the mention of Shady Tree the girl's manner changed. "That ought to cover it," she said roughly. "Just. You know what they say about this joint? All you can eat for only three hundred bucks."

"If I have a son," said Bond, "I'll give him just one piece of advice when he comes of age. I'll say 'Spend your money how you like, but don't buy yourself anything that eats.'

Bond straightened himself slowly, and for a moment he could only gaze into the grinning hawk-like face of Shady Tree, with blank disbelief his bulging eyes. "So you were doing a bit of the purist thing to a gal?" he finally said. He looked with delight at the friend he had just seen as a "cocon" or "milk-bottle" on a playground bed.

From the sun-baked sidewalks of New York, and into the arms of the sultry sulty Tiffany Case.

She laughed and looked with approval at Bond. "Why heavens to Betsy, Mistah Bond," she said. "Yo all sure do say the purist thing to a gal."

"And as for the look," Bond continued. "It's a dream, and you know it is. I love black velvet, especially against a sunburned skin, and I'm glad you don't wear too much jewellery and I'm glad you don't paint your fingernails. Altogether, I bet you're the prettiest girl in New York tonight."

"What am I doing tomorrow?" "What am I doing tomorrow?" she repeated. Tiffany Case sat in front of Bond, one put on in front of waiters. "Why, I'm going to stay off to Las Vegas, taking the 20th Century to Chicago and then the Superchief to Los Angeles. It's a long way round, but I've had enough flying for a few days. What about you?"

"I'm going up to San Francisco. I'm to pack a horse that's to make me some money," she said. "I suppose it's a fix," said Tiffany Case. "I'm sorry, Shady. She drank some of the champagne. Her mood had changed again. She shrugged her shoulders.

"You seem to have made quite a hit with Shady this morning," she said, indifferently. "He wants to put you to work for the mob."

Bond looked down into the pink pool of champagne. He could feel the fog of treachery enveloping up between him and this girl he liked. He closed his mind to it. He must get on with tricking her.

★ ★ ★ BOND paid the cheque and in league when you sign up with the Spangles. If I were you, I'd think a long time before you join our cosy little circle. And don't go and get in wrong with the mob. If you're planning anything of that sort, you'd better start taking lessons on a harp."

★ ★ ★ BOND paid the cheque and in silence they went out of the cool envelope of the restaurant into the sultry night that stank of petrol and hot asphalt.

"Staying at the Astor, too," she said as they got into the cab. She pressed into the far corner of the back seat and sat hunched up with her chin in her hand, looking out at the hideous deadly nightshade of the neon.

Bond said nothing. He looked out of the other window and cursed his job. All he wanted to say to this girl was: "Listen. Come with me. I like you. Don't be afraid. It can't be worse than alone." But if she said Yes he would have been smart. And he didn't want to be smart with this girl. It was his job to use her, but whatever the job indicated, there was one way he could never "use" this particular girl. Through the heart.

In front of the Astor he helped her out on to the sidewalk and she stood with her back to him while he paid the driver. They walked up the steps in the stiff silence of a married couple after a bad evening ending in a row.

★ ★ ★ THEY got their keys at the desk and she said "Five" to the boy on the lift. She stood with her face to the door as they rode up. Bond saw that the knuckles of the hand that held her evening boy were white.

At the fifth she walked quickly out and made no protest when Bond followed her. They walked round several corners until they came to her door. She bent down and lit the key into the lock and pushed the door open. Then she turned in the entrance and faced him.

"Listen, you Bond person..." It had started as the beginning of an angry speech, but then she paused and looked straight into his eyes and Bond saw that her eyelashes were wet.

And suddenly she had flung an arm round his neck and her face was against his and she was saying "Look after yourself, James. I don't want to lose you." And then she pulled his face against hers and kissed him once, hard and long on the lips, with a fierce tenderness that was almost without sex.

But as Bond's arms went round her and he started to return her kiss, she suddenly stiffened and fought her way free, and the moment was over. With her hand on the knob of the open door, she turned and looked at him, and the smile was back in her eyes.

"Now get away from me," she said firmly, and slammed the door and locked it. "I'm going to bed," she said, and turned and walked away.

ENGLAND'S BOWLERS PROBABLY HOLD KEY TO VICTORY IN FIRST TEST TODAY

Nottingham, June 7. England's bowlers, particularly the spinners, probably hold the key to victory over Australia in the first cricket Test, which begins at Trent Bridge today.

Favourites to begin the defence of the Ashes with a win, England will have a moral and psychological advantage. There can be no question about the superiority of their bowling and the Australians will have the unusual experience of opening a Test campaign without a victory over an English County side.

There is little to choose between the batting and fielding. Australia's batting has not been very impressive, in spite of some recent large scores, and fielding lapses have cost them wickets and runs.

The Australians have been beaten by Surrey, the County Champions, and were on the wrong end of a draw with Yorkshire. The spin bowlers of both county sides exposed the limitations of Australia's batsmen against this type of attack. The only two wins gained by the Australians were against Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

UNFORTUNATE BLOW

The break-up of the Statham-Tyson fast bowling combination is an unfortunate blow to England. The "shock" bowling of this pair played a leading part in retaining the Ashes in Australia, and in the only Test they appeared together last season they beat South Africa by an innings at Trent Bridge.

The Australians, who have had numerous injuries, had all 17 players at practice today. Opener Colin McDonald is fit and almost certain to play. Ian Craig is available but unlikely to be chosen. Ray Lindwall came through a severe trial without mishap, but all-rounder Ron Archer will have a further test.

Neither side is expected to be announced until shortly before the start today.

Trent Bridge once had the reputation of being a "featherbed" pitch, but change of preparation has changed the character of it in some ways. Five of the seven Tests played there since the war have reached a definite decision.

The local weather forecast for the early part of the five-day Test is not too promising. "Unsettled, rain or showers at times" is the prediction until Saturday.

COVERED PITCH

Rain yesterday afternoon did not affect the pitch, which was covered.

England have not beaten Australia at Nottingham since 1930. Australia won three and lost two of the previous nine games played there.

It was reported today that Yorkshire spin bowler Johnny Wardle would report to the selectors that he had fibrositis and would not be fit to play.

The Chairman of the Selectors, Mr. G. O. Allen, said it was incorrect to say that Wardle was out of the match. There was, however, some doubt about his fitness. —Reuter.

Italian Farmer Wins Tourist Trophy Races

Douglas, Isle of Man, June 6. Carlo Ubbiali, 28-year-old Italian farmer, won both the 250 cc and 125 cc races, in the Tourist Trophy Motor-Cycling race here today. He rode MV Augusta machines.

Both events were run over the hazardous, windswept course of 97 decimal 11 miles.

Ubbiali won the lightweight 125 cc event at a speed of 69 decimal 13 mph, faster than the 67 decimal 93 mph at which he took the 250 cc. race.

Foreign machines and riders took the leading places in both races. In the 250 cc another Italian, R. Colombo (MV Augusta) was second, followed by two Germans, and a Czechoslovakian.

In the 125 cc race second, third and fourth places were filled by Spaniards riding Montesa.

F. Hillebrand of Germany, with M. Grunwald as passenger, won the sidecar event on a BMW in record time and speed for sidecars.

He covered the course in 1 hour 23 mins. 12.2 secs. to average 79.03 mph (12.69 kph). —Reuter.

Gamini Goonesena Unlikely To Play Any More Cricket For Cambridge U

London, June 6. Cambridge University received a bitter blow today with the news that Gamini Goonesena, their Ceylon-born secretary and all-rounder, is unlikely to play any more cricket before the University season ends with the match against Oxford at Lords on July 7, and possibly not again during the whole summer.

Goonesena, who comes from Colombo, complained of lack of fitness during the match with Middlesex which finished last Friday and a medical examination revealed a suspected puncture of a lung. He has been detained in hospital for an indefinite period.

Should Goonesena be kept out of the game then Nottinghamshire, his county, and indeed cricket as a whole, will be the worse for the loss of one of the country's most outstanding players.

Not only did he head the batting and bowling averages for Cambridge last season, but he became the first man to complete the "double" of 1,000 runs and 100 wickets.

Acceptors. Goonesena hit 1,300 runs and took 124 wickets last summer. So far this season, his 100 breaks have accounted for 81 wickets and he has scored 320 runs. —China Mail Special.

WINNER TO MEET MOORE?

Floyd Patterson Favoured To Beat Jackson In Elimination Fight

New York, June 6. Young Floyd Patterson was favoured at 12-5 today as he and Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson finished training for their $125,000 Heavyweight elimination fight at Madison Square Garden on Friday night.

Although there will be no blackout of the nationally televised and broadcast 12-rounder, the managing director of the International Boxing Club, Harry Markson, said the increased demand for tickets indicated a crowd of at least 10,000 and a gate of more than $50,000. In addition, the TV-radio fee is $75,000.

Archie Moore's knockout victory over Yolande Pompey in London last night stimulated interest in the Patterson-Jackson fight, for now it is regarded as nearly a certainty that the winner on Friday will fight Moore in September for the vacant Heavyweight crown.

The Chairman of the NY State Athletic Commission, Julius Helfand, said: "We will

LOOKING AT SPORT

To Revive Cricket—Extend The LBW Law—Bradman

By DENNIS HART

Cricket is not what it was. The game which became glorious through the simple idea of one man attacking with a ball and another with a bat is getting hide-bound with fancy theories and formulas.

For the most part attack has been forgotten. Batsmen use the bat primarily to keep their wicket intact. The bowler's main aim is to keep runs down. Indeed, in Test cricket the biggest crime for a batsman is to lose his wicket and for a bowler to give away runs.

Trouble is this negative approach pays dividends.

Remember South Africa last year? They almost ground down England through leg-theory bowling of left-hander Trevor Goddard and off-spinner Hugh Taftield and the so-patient bat of Jackie McGlew supported again by the indefatigable Goddard.

No! that England can complain. She hasn't done too badly out of slow-motion cricket.

But why has it all happened? Put it down to bowlers getting wise.

Cricket is a batsman's game. Bowlers take second place. So when during the 1930's wickets were made to order for batsmen the bowlers rebelled. Instead of tossing up deliveries to feed the favoured ones' strokes they pitched on the leg side and so cramped batsmen's movements.

The batsmen's answer was to take more time over their runs.

RIGHTS AND WRONGS

Whatever the rights and wrongs of the business something had to be done. In 1935 the MCC altered the lbw law. Previously batsmen could only be out lbw before wicket to balls which pitched directly between one wicket and the other. The new amendment allowed that if a batsman's leg was directly in front of the wicket he could be lbw to an off-break pitching outside the off-stump—providing, of course, the ball would have hit the wicket.

The idea was to encourage bowlers to bowl at the off-stump and so revive the glories of off-side play. But it was too late and too little. The rot had set in.

With wickets still dotted in batsmen's favour bowlers still turned to keep down the runs. And so it has gone on, and the game has got slower.

Now something must be done. That's what the experts say. —Don Bradman, Learie Constantine, Jack Hobbs and many others.

Their views are given in this year's Wisden (Sporting Handbooks, 15s). Bill Bowes, former England bowling star, was commissioned by Wisden to carry out an international inquiry to find the answer to negative cricket.

From it emerges one main villain of the piece—the new lbw rule.

This declares Herbert Sutcliffe, "encouraging in-swing and off-spinners and off bowlers today appear to be exploiting this particular theory with a peaked leg-side field," which, as Hobbs explains, hampers stroke-making.

THE SOLUTION

And the solution? Many are suggested, ranging from having another stump to passing a new law limiting the fielders on the leg side. But as the crux of the matter concerns the lbw rule there, surely, is where the solution lies.

Bradman would like the law extended. "Since 1932," he says, "I have contended that an extension of the lbw law on the off-side so that a batsman would be given out even though his leg is outside the off-stump, would be the best antidote to leg-theory bowling."

Former England bowler Ian Peedie agrees with him. West Indies skipper Jeff Stollmeyer would go even further. He says: "I have not yet seen any valid reason why the present lbw law should not be amended to include the leg-side as well as the off."

In short, if a batsman stops the ball with his pads and it would have hit the wicket then he is out, no matter where it is pitched.

That brings us back to the simple idea of attacking ball, and vice-versa. And that, surely, is just what we all want.

COUNTY CRICKET

Derek Richardson Rescues Worcestershire From Trouble At Lords

London, June 6. Nottingham, awaiting tomorrow's start of the First Test against Australia, Derek Richardson, a younger brother, rescued Worcestershire from trouble in a dull day's cricket at Lords.

More than an hour was lost by rain which also interfered with most of the other games, but even so there was little about which to enthuse in the Worcester match apart from Richardson's solid 71 in 145 minutes, with most of his ten fours hit in an arc between midwicket and fine leg.

Doug Insole, the Essex captain, scored his fourth century of the season, and his second in successive days but he had to fight for many of his runs. There were only six boundaries in the first hundred of his 120 which occupied five minutes under three hours. But he was chiefly responsible for checking what might have been a collapse when Essex lost their first three wickets for 40. Then he and Les Savill, who came into the side for Trevor Bailey—on Test duty—put on 181 for the fourth wicket.

For a three-figure score. He hit fifteen boundaries in the 100, scored in two hours thirty-five minutes, and with Gerry Lester (71) took part in an opening partnership of 202.

In between showers at Bradford, Yorkshire took 245 off the bowling of the Championship leaders Sussex for the loss of four wickets. Frank Lowson and Vic Wilson put on 120 for the second wicket in two and three-quarter hours, Lowson hitting a six and eleven fours and Wilson six fours.

Gloucestershire's experiment of playing evening cricket, to attract spectators after working hours, was ruined by the rain. It had been arranged to start in the early afternoon and carry on until 1815 GMT but only two hours play was possible before a violent storm caused stumps to be drawn at 1815 GMT.

CLOSE OF PLAY SCORES

At Brentwood: Essex 278 for four, (Insole 129, Savill not out; versus Somerset.)

At Buxton: Derbyshire 86, (Tattersall right-arm medium offspinner six for 57), (Hilton left-arm slow spin four for 12), Lancashire nine for one.

At Cardiff: Glamorgan 203, (Watkins 50, Jepson right-arm medium five for 47), Nottinghamshire 17 for no wicket.

At Leicester: Leicestershire 321, (Hallam 126, Lester 71, Shirreff right-arm medium eight for 111 versus Kent). (Leics all out at close.)

At Bradford: Yorkshire 245 for four, (Lowson 93, Wilson 55 versus Sussex).

LOOK-LEARN TENNIS

Britain's Roger Becker Has Earned Top Ranking

By DOROTHY LITTLE

Our present young Davis Cup team may well emulate the successes of Lacoste, Borotra, Brugnon, and Cochet, the brilliant French quartet who won the Cup in the 20's, and held the Wimbledon title between them for six successive years.

The modern idea that players now mature much earlier is borne out occasionally by a brilliant youngster, but on the whole I believe that a player reaches peak around 23 or 24.

With Billy Knight, Michael Davies, and Bobby Wilson 20, and Roger Becker only 22, we can look for a steady strengthening of their game over the next few years.

They have travelled extensively and had considerable competition at International level. I am prepared to overlook the fact that they can still be made to look second rate on occasion and regard some of their brilliant successes as an indication of their potential.

WILL TO WIN

These boys lose to one another to the confusion of those who try to "rank" them in order of merit; I feel that Becker, the most consistent, has earned the No 1 ranking. Whenever I have seen him play, I have been impressed by his dogged determination and will to win.

He is like a terrier and never lets go till the match is ended. Not particularly tall, he makes up for any lack of height by his speed about the court, his vigorous attack of the net, and the quickness with which he anticipates a lob.

His strokes are compact, businesslike, and waste nothing on flourish. He hits the ball flat and has no obvious weak-

THESE TWO-YEAR-OLDS SHOULD SHOW A PROFIT

By RICHARD BAERLEIN

The 2,000 Guineas winner, Gilles de Retz, made his first appearance at the Salisbury May meeting last year. So it is only natural to discuss the prospects of some of the two-year-olds which ran at Salisbury the other week.

Sir Gordon Richards introduced three nice colts in Sir Campanel, Pipe of Peace and Olaf.

Although beaten, most professional paddock critics appeared to like Pipe of Peace best. This son of Supreme Court cost 7,000 guineas as a yearling and he ran very green.

His half-sister Big Berry, was exceptionally useful but the colts of this family have so far proved very disappointing.

Pipe of Peace made up about five lengths in the final furlong and a half, and there is no knowing how much improvement he will make by the time he runs at Ascot.

IMPRESSIVE

More impressive was the victory of Miss Dorothy Page's Olaf. This is a strongly-built colt with pasterns large enough to plough through the heaviest going. I can imagine no colt better suited to wet Ascot than this son of Arctic Star.

Olaf is out of a mare by Donatello II and therefore his stamina should not be questioned. Arctic Star is now producing some very high-class looking horses of every age.

Mr Joe McGrath is about the only breeder living today, rich enough and bold enough to have carried out the experiment of sending Arctic Star to the stud with success. Arctic Star never ran and under these conditions it is generally impossible to get breeders to send mares.

COURAGEOUS

Olaf should certainly train on and, although he was obviously hailing the firm ground at Salisbury, he ran on courageously to take the lead in the last furlong, and win like a good colt. It was the fastest time of the four two-year-old races of the boys he lacks the ball control necessary to cope with a crisis, and sometimes even to take advantage of a self-created opening, losing control of the rally, and with it, the point.

POOR CONTROL

Stroke for stroke, these youngsters are often on an equal footing with their opponents, but the ability to control the ball to the end of the rally is the hallmark of the Champion, particularly when under pressure.

Wilson, with an easy flowing stroke, is the stylist. His footwork is a model to copy, particularly on the backhand. So many players make this shot difficult simply because they will face the net when striking.

This way, the racket must move across the body and the flight of the ball. The body must be turned away from the net when preparing for this shot, then the racket can follow the flight of the ball on the follow-through.

Billy Knight was a sensation when first he appeared on the tennis scene, but there is much he can do to raise his game to higher levels.

ERRATIC

His backhand is apt to crack under pressure. He must try to develop this into an attacking stroke. He must discard his cut backhand, and use a flatter or top spin drive.

His overhead is erratic, too, due, I'm sure, to being over-anxious and hitting it too soon.

Many of his smashes go out of court, proving that his racket is not sufficiently over the ball. On the other hand, he plays with vigour and abandon which might well place his potential higher than the other three once he has "ironed out" his game.

Davies had to fight hard for recognition as an up and coming player, although he won the Welsh Junior Championships at the early age of 12.

He says what he thinks and altogether a very determined young man, inclined to be temperamental on court, he can nevertheless give a great fighting display. His service is strong, and he uses his height and ability to spin the ball to great advantage.

FIRST CUP

John Barrett gets his first Davis Cup "cap" at the expense of Wilson, who is obviously not fit.

An excellent match player, he is a left hander with a very good spinning serve.

He and Becker are a good pair. If Knight is not playing well then Barrett may well replace him in singles.

He has beaten Becker this spring. A good choice, since he can hold his own again but not the world beaten.

Can any one of them reach World Championship class? Or will they be the stepping stones to success for younger players coming after them?

In either case, we are lucky to have these boys. Even if they do not themselves win Wimbledon, they will for years be an incentive and a target for those still in the junior ranks. Nor should it be forgotten that they have reached the position they have without the advantage of tough competitive opposition in this country. All credit to them!

Sebbie Breasley gave Sir Campanel such an easy race that it is difficult to judge his precise ability. Although he is not the scope of the other horses mentioned, he was the nice looking member of his field, and ran a very pleasing race.

SPORTS ROUND-UP

Golden Boy Of English Soccer Turns Down £1,000 A Year Offer

Will Mannion, once the "Golden Boy" of English soccer, out of a job since his suspension by Poole Town Football Club, has been offered a sales representative's post at £1,000 a year plus car, in his home area of Middlesbrough. In the meantime, Poole have offered him terms for next season. But says Mannion: "I shall never return to Poole."

Never Say Die, 1954, Derby and St Leger winner, has been presented to Britain by Mr Robert Sterling Clark, the 80-year-old American racehorse owner. Never Say Die was to have had four seasons at the stud in England and then return to the United States. He will now remain at the National Stud.

Ken Barrington, Surrey and England batsman, and a possible for the Test team against Australia, is unlikely to play cricket again for a fortnight. Barrington was injured in the game with Leicestershire. He has a swollen foot, and a toe-nail may have to be removed.

BANNED PLAYER
Freddie, thunders the "Dandy Kook" of tennis binned by the Australia LTA from representing his matches, will be playing at Wimbledon this month. Huber has been told his application as a private individual would be welcomed.

Joe Lucy will fight Sammy McCarthy for the British Light-weight Championship held by Lucy at Wembley Pool on June 26. The entire show, the first professional promotion at Wembley for 10 years, had been threatened by a dispute between Jim Wicks, manager of Lucy, and promoter Harry Levine. Wembley boss Sir Arthur Elvin stepped in and managed to patch up the quarrel.

Norman Sheld, world pursuit champion, is in the English Olympic "possibly" cycling team to meet a French Olympic team over all the recognized Games distances at Home Hill track early this month.

FOOTBALLER HERO'S SON KILLED

It was a day of tragedy for "Footballer of the Year" Bert Trautmann. Only a few hours after he had boarded an aircraft for Germany to attend the International Match between Germany and England he was told that his only child, six-year-old Johnny, had been killed in a car accident.

Trautmann, the German born hero of the British Cup Final who broke his neck playing for Manchester City in the Cup Final against Birmingham, hurried back to Britain immediately to be with his grief stricken wife. His home is near Manchester, the city where he was a prisoner of war in 1945.

June Foulds—Wonder Schoolgirl Sprinter Comes Back

By ERIC NICHOLLS

"They never come back," must be the biggest sporting lie of the century. You hear it everywhere, from Tokyo to Tottenham, from Singapore to Southampton. Sporting misses are plentiful, it's true. But every so often a sporting Mrs re-enters the scene in the cause of lie-baiting.

Such a person is Mrs June Paul, the 23-year-old Highbury housewife, who was responsible for the raising of cheeks and eyebrows when as June Foulds, schoolgirl, she became British Women's 100 Yards Champion.

A lot of athletes have burned up the track since 10-year-old June took time off from studies to show 'em what sixth formers are really made of.

June was made of the sort of stuff that earned her a share in the British 100 yards record, a place in the British team for the European Games where she clinched the relay win with a last lap victory over the fabulous Fanny Blankers-Koen.

It took her to Helsinki for the 1952 Olympic Games. There June announced her engagement to fencer Raymond Paul. They were married the following year and June retired from active competition.

MORE ALIVE

But her love for the track never faded. And the fact that husband Raymond was fencing on helped to keep it even more alive.

June just had to come back. So with baby son Steven in good hands, she put aside her apron and her typewriter—June is a secretary in the Paul family business of fencing equipment—and tried her luck in last year's National Championships.

GOOD IDEAS

"I also joined the Franz Stampfli class for a while," says June, "but although he's not so well known, Charlie has definite and very good ideas on the training of athletes."

Her training presented a problem, though. To spend three or four evenings a week out on the cold track after a full day's work and run a home was "no picnic. She had to find a way to split it up."

Her flat in Highbury overlooks the Arsenal Stadium. So it was that June knocked on Tom Whittaker's office door one morning and asked the Highbury chief about the possibilities of using his excellent cinder track for a little early morning practice.

"Only too pleased. We are all for this sort of thing," was genial Tom's reply. So, duly armed with a key to this famous football arena, June made her way up the steps, and past the bust of Herbert Chapman at 030 each morning.

Training would finish when a wave from husband Raymond indicated that breakfast was ready.

June made rapid strides, and last week in the Middlesex Championships her hard work reaped its reward.

Following are the entries for the Ladies' Bowls League.

A total of nine entries for the Ladies' Lawn Bowls League were received. It was revealed in a Ladies' Bowls Ladies' Meeting held yesterday in South China Morning Post Boardroom with Mr R. B. Marshall in

EVER-PRESENT PRESSURES OF INFLATION &amp; DEFLATION

By JOHN MORKA

New York, June 6. The US is staking a good measure of its future well-being on its ability to keep a tender balance between the ever-present pressures of inflation and deflation.

Government moves aimed at establishing this balance are off one of the most hectic rounds of discussion in recent American economic history.

The specific move that triggered the controversy that has now cut across party lines was the action by the Federal Reserve Board last month raising the discount rate. This is the rate effect of the boost—the fifth in a year—which was to force interest rates higher, curtail credit for business and consumer alike and generally to put a damper on over-expansion.

Not Everyone

This meant that the monetary authorities apparently believed that inflation—not deflation—was a potential danger to the economy. It wanted also to curtail bank loans to accumulate inventories of steel and metal products. It emphasized by its action that it felt the country would in the long run be better off for a little economic pinching here and there.

But not everyone agreed about the wisdom of this action. At that time—early April—the steel industry was clamouring for a price increase. Industrial prices were moving upward. Business went ahead

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 6. Grain futures were irregular on the Board of Trade today, with July corn showing considerable strength by selling to about one cent higher than September.

Soybeans also moved higher in erratic action today due to strength in oil and meal markets, although some liquidation opposition was encountered.

Profit-taking and some hedge selling brought wheat down after early morning gains. Scattered rains were reported in portions of the southwest, but combining operations were not hampered.

Wheat closed off  $\frac{1}{4}$  to up  $\frac{1}{4}$ ; soybeans up 4 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  cents.

Prosperity

Any kind of recession, let alone a serious depression, would carry a lot of weight in the forthcoming election. Republicans under President Eisenhower have been pre-empting the party of “peace and prosperity.” Their chances of winning the presidential election next November—and possibly control of Congress—rest in great part on their ability to keep the economy running and jobs plentiful. THURSDAY, JUNE 7, 1956.

JOHN CLARKE'S CASEBOOK

SOMETHING FOR WHITSUN

In the early morning, before the street doors opened to customers before the elegant young sales-women arrived, Margaret had the fashion house to herself.

Her work as a cleaner was done in those early hours—and so was her day-dreaming.

Members of the firm's staff, arriving early and seeing the dumpy little cleaner would never have suspected the substance of Margaret's dreams. And she would never tell them. Daydreams are best kept secret.

Margaret dreamed of what it might be like to wear the pretty summer frocks, the gay coats, the wonderfully absurd accessories which, shrouded against the dust, surrounded her as she went about her work of sweeping and polishing.

A WARDROBE

A spring filled out into a mile of summer, Margaret's longing to possess clothes to match the season, something different to wear, grew until it was quite out of hand, and overwhelmed her.

She began to steal the beautiful clothes—from a stockroom. A crisp, exciting sariet frock first in style and shade a little young for a woman of 33, perhaps, but the prospect of its ownership took years off Margaret's age, then a powder-blue, casual sort of coat, un-tucked, another coat.

She used some guile to acquire her summer wardrobe. Each thing she stole she put into a box which she buried in a rubbish heap until she could safely take it from the shop.

THE PAST

She was on her way home, hugging her latest capture, when the police stopped her and questioned her. Margaret confessed to her crime. She told the police about the other things they would find in the furnished room she rented from her sister-in-law.

At Clerkenwell Court, Margaret pleaded guilty to stealing the frocks and coats.

"Is anything known about her?" asked the magistrate, Mr E. G. Robey.

MURDER CHARGE

Chen Chi-kam, 35, unemployed, of No. 6, Wo On Lane, third floor, was remanded for seven days in custody by Mr Hin-shing Lo at Central this morning on a charge of murder.

It was alleged that Chen murdered a Chinese female, Chan Kiu, at his premises on May 8, this year.

Going To Moscow
